The Courses in the School of Philosophy are intended partly for undergraduates in Cornell University who desire a general acquaintance with the elements of the philosophical sciences, but mainly for graduates of this and other institutions who are preparing themselves for public positions (clergymen, teachers, professors, etc.) and who can give a protracted period of time (not less, it is recommended, than two, three, or four years), to exclusive study and investigation of some of the subjects embraced in the School of Philosophy. For the Master's degree at least one year of residence is always, and for the Doctor's degree at least three years of residence are normally, required. The School awards annually to distinguished graduates of Cornell and other universities, three fellowships of $500 each, and six scholarships of $300 each. The scholarships are intended for college graduates who, during their undergraduate course or subsequently, have given evidence of special attainments in Philosophy, or in any of its branches. The fellowships are intended for graduate students of one or more years' standing, with high records, in the best American or foreign universities. The School is provided with a richly equipped Psychological Laboratory. Besides the University Library, which is well equipped with philosophical books, there is in the Library building, for the exclusive use of graduate students in Philosophy, a large and appropriately furnished seminary room with a carefully selected special library. The School receives regularly all the important philosophical journals published both at home and abroad. For further information address The Registrar, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.
